In today's changing world, your present encyclopaedia may not be good enough for your children.

Dear Friend,

If your present encyclopaedia is even a few years old, chances are it's out of date. The world has simply passed it by.

In fact, the world has changed so dramatically in the last few years, your present encyclopaedia may tell you nothing about many important things.

Even worse, an outdated encyclopaedia may mislead you, because what was once accepted as fact, has now been proved false. You might be willing to accept that risk -- but what about your children? It can put them at a real disadvantage in school.

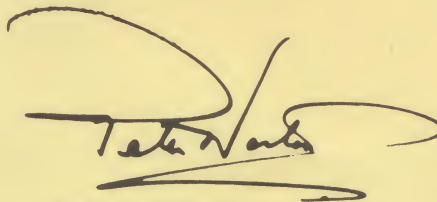

Sure, they can go to the library to look things up, but that's not always possible. And it's not quite the same as having a really good encyclopaedia at home, at their fingertips, so they can get in the habit of using it any time they need information.

And speaking of children, don't forget your children are growing up.

Which means that if your present encyclopaedia was designed just for "kids," your children have outgrown it. And a "kids" encyclopaedia is the last thing they need today.

That's why I urge you to mail the enclosed postpaid card for your Free Booklet on The New Encyclopaedia Britannica 3. It's not just the most revolutionary, up-to-date encyclopaedia in the world. It's also the only encyclopaedia your children can't outgrow.

Sincerely,
